

Run a Deep Research pass to build a reusable NICHE & AUDIENCE PROFILE.

NICHE / TOPIC AREA: [e.g. personal finance for freelancers / home fitness for beginners / AI tools for small business]

TARGET AUDIENCE: [who the writing is for — their knowledge level, what they care about, what they struggle with, how they talk]

Your goal is NOT to write a script. Collect stable, reusable background that will ground future writing in this niche and make it fit this audience.

Return ONLY:

1. AUDIENCE PROFILE

- What this audience already knows vs. needs explained
- What they actually care about and what they're skeptical of
- The tone and level of formality that fits them
- Words/framings that resonate, and ones that turn them off

2. NICHE TERMINOLOGY

- The real vocabulary, jargon, and phrases insiders in this niche use
- Terms to avoid or that signal an outsider

3. RECURRING THEMES & PAIN POINTS

- The problems, questions, and topics that come up again and again in this niche

4. CONCRETE REFERENCE POINTS

- Real examples, common scenarios, well-known cases, or figures/stats that writers in this niche can reference for specificity
- For any statistic or claim, note roughly where it came from and flag uncertain ones as "VERIFY"

5. GENRE & FORMAT CONVENTIONS

- How content in this niche is usually structured (typical openings, flow, length, level of formality)
- Common formats the audience expects

6. SPECIFICITY BANK

- A list of concrete, non-obvious details, terms, and examples the writer

can pull from to avoid generic writing

Keep entries short and scannable. This is reusable reference material, not a draft. Do not write prose beyond what each section asks for.

@tooldrop